

Nancy Howell Agee

President and CEO of Carilion Clinic, Roanoke

Agee heads a health system that includes eight hospitals, a multi-specialty physician group, the Jefferson College of Health Sciences and the Virginia Tech Carilion School of Medicine and Research Institute, a joint venture with Virginia Tech. Carilion has 11,317 employees. Agee began her career as a nurse, rising through the ranks to her current position in 2011. She is a member of the board of Roanoke Gas Co., HomeTown Bank, Solstas Lab, Virginia Tech Carilion School of Medicine, Virginia Hospital & Healthcare Association, Mill Mountain Theatre and Center in the Square. She also is a member of the board of commissioners with The Joint Commission, an organization that accredits hospitals and health-care organizations worldwide.

Jane P. Batten

Philanthropist, Virginia Beach

Since the death of media executive Frank Batten Sr. in 2009, his wife, Jane, has continued their philanthropy, providing major gifts to educational and cultural institutions throughout Virginia. In 2008, the Battens made a $20 million contribution for the construction of a $64 million library in Norfolk. In 2010, Mrs. Batten made an additional $20 million donation through the Batten Foundation as a challenge grant to complete the project. Last year she received Old Dominion University's Hugo Owens Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Award, recognizing her community involvement and service to the disadvantaged. She was the first non-African-American to win the award. Batten is a member and former chair of the Virginia Wesleyan College Board of Trustees and vice chair of the board of Smart Beginnings South Hampton Roads.

Peter Bernard

CEO, Bon Secours Virginia, Richmond

Bernard leads a health system that has four hospitals in the Richmond area and three in Hampton Roads. Bon Secours has agreed to be the major sponsor of a $10 million summer training camp in Richmond for the Washington Redskins. In exchange for $6.4 million in naming rights and lease fees, the city of Richmond will lease a former school site to Bon Secours for an expansion of its nearby St. Mary's Hospital. Bon Secours' Richmond Community Hospital in the East End also will be expanded. Bernard has served on boards of the American Red Cross, the YMCA, Central Virginia Health Network and the Children's Museum. His community involvement includes the American Heart Association, Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, United Way, American College of Health Care Executives, Greater Richmond Chamber of Commerce, The Leadership Institute, The Forum Club, St. Joseph's Villa and St. Bridget's Parish.

David L. Bernd

CEO of Sentara Healthcare, Norfolk

Bernd has led Sentara since 1994. It is a $5 billion health system that includes 10 acute-care hospitals, a 618-provider medical group, a medical staff of 3,680 physicians and health plans insuring 440,000 people. Modern Healthcare magazine ranked Sentara as the No. 1 integrated health-care network in the nation in 2010 and 2011. Sentara is the only system named to the top 10 for 15 years. In recent years, three hospitals outside Hampton Roads — Martha Jefferson Hospital in Charlottesville, Rockingham Memorial Hospital in Harrisonburg and Potomac Hospital in Woodbridge — have joined the Sentara system. Bernd was appointed to the ODU Board of Visitors in 2008 and reappointed in 2012. He was rector from 2010 to 2012.

Gloria Bohan

CEO, Omega World Travel, Fairfax County

A former teacher, Bohan began Omega World Travel in 1972 in Fredericksburg with one employee. Today, Omega World Travel is the country's third-largest travel management company with $1.1 billion in revenue and more than 800 employees at 100 locations worldwide. It is one of the largest privately owned companies in Virginia and is one of the largest woman-owned enterprises in the country. Omega Travel has been an industry leader, introducing on-site travel offices, business travel management, electronic centralization of accounting and travel booking, the Internet site Cruise.com and government travel. Bohan is a member of the Washington Business Hall of Fame and Enterprising Women Hall of Fame. She also has been named "One of the 25 Most Influential Leaders in the Travel Industry" by Tour and Travel News and "Businesswoman of the Year" by Office Depot.

Macon F. Brock Jr.

Chairman, Dollar Tree Inc., Chesapeake

Brock is a co-founder of Dollar Tree, a Fortune 500 company operating more than 4,400 stores. He was CEO from 1993 to 2003. Brock and his wife, Joan, are well known for their philanthropy, especially to their alma maters, Randolph-Macon College and Longwood University, respectively. In 2011, they announced a $10 million gift to Randolph-Macon. Two of their latest big gifts are a $3 million donation to Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk to establish an institute for community and global health and a $3.5 million contribution to the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to help build the $20 million Brock Environmental Center in Virginia Beach. In 2009, the Virginia General Assembly passed a resolution acknowledging Brock's contributions to his community and country. He also serves on the board of Toano-based Lumber Liquidators Inc. and rue21 inc., a Pennsylvania-based specialty apparel retailer.

Wesley G. "Wes" Bush

Chairman, president and CEO, Northrop Grumman Corp., Fairfax County

On Bush's first day as CEO of Los Angeles-based Northrop Grumman Corp., he announced the company was moving its headquarters to the Washington, D.C., area to be closer to its primary customer, the federal government. That announcement led to an intense competition by Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia to become the company's new home. One of the nation's largest defense contractors, Northrop Grumman eventually chose a site in Fairfax County and now is Virginia's second-largest Fortune 500 company. Northrop Grumman also has spun off its shipbuilding division, which became Newport News-based Huntington Ingalls Industries Inc. It had $6.6 billion in revenue in 2011. Bush serves on the board of Norfolk Southern Corp., the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum, Conservation International and the Business-Higher Education Forum. In 2008, Bush was named to the National Infrastructure Advisory Council.

Stephen M. "Steve" Case

Chairman and CEO, Revolution, Washington, D.C.

Case is best known as the co-founder and former CEO of America Online (AOL), which was based for many years in the Dulles area of Loudoun County. He led the company's merger with Time Warner Corp. in 2000. Since retiring as chairman of AOL Time Warner in 2003, he has founded an investment company, Revolution, and invested in a dozen other businesses, including Revolution Health Group, Zipcar, Living Social and the luxury destination club Exclusive Resorts. Case is chairman of the Startup America Partnership, co-chair of the National Advisory Council on Innovation and Entrepreneurship and a member of President Obama's Council on Jobs and Competitiveness.

Ben J. Davenport Jr.

Chairman, Davenport Energy and First Piedmont Corp., Chatham

Photo by Mark Rhodes

Davenport has long been a leader in transforming Southern Virginia's economy. He spent much of the past year, however, fighting against one proposed change, uranium mining near his hometown in Pittsylvania County.

Davenport co-founded the Future of the Piedmont Foundation, which drew up a plan using tobacco settlement money to reshape the economy of Danville and Pittsylvania. The results include a regional fiber-optic network and the Institute for Advanced Learning and Research in Danville.

Davenport led a group of regional leaders, the Alliance for Progress in Southern Virginia, opposed to lifting a 31-year-old uranium-mining ban. Efforts to lift the moratorium stalled in the 2013 General Assembly session.

"To this point, key members of the General Assembly have listened to the concerns of the people and businesses of Southern Virginia and agree that to lift the ban on mining uranium would be a mistake for many reasons," Davenport said in early February.

Davenport is past rector of the Virginia Tech Board of Visitors and a past chairman of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce. He serves on the boards of the Virginia Chamber, Danville Regional Foundation, Hargrave Military Academy, Virginia Early Childhood Foundation, American National Bank, Virginia Game Commission, Virginia Tech Foundation, Mid-Atlantic Broadband Communities and Boxley.

Christine Chmura

President and chief economist, Chmura Economics & Analytics, Richmond

Chmura is a widely quoted source on regional and national economic trends and writes a monthly column for the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Her research has figured in some of the biggest economic issues facing the commonwealth. The firm prepared a socio-economic study of uranium mining in Southern Virginia and a study and strategic plan for modeling and simulation in Hampton Roads. For the past year and a half, the firm has worked with Virginia Tourism Corp., doing primary research on the attitudes and perceptions of tourists as well as their interest in traveling to the state. Chmura serves on the Governor's Economic Advisory Board of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the Governor's Commission on Economic Development & Job Creation.

Whittington W. "Whitt" Clement

Hunton & Williams, Richmond

Clement, head of the law firm's government relations team, represents clients at the Virginia General Assembly where he is a familiar face. Clement was a secretary of transportation under Democratic Gov. Mark R. Warner from 2002 to 2005. Before joining the governor's cabinet, he was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, representing the Danville area for 14 years. He also served on the Commission on the Future of Higher Education and the Commission on the Future of Transportation. He is chairman of LEAD Virginia, a statewide leadership development program, and a member of the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia, which he chaired in 2008 and 2009. He also served as chairman of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce in 2011 and was president of the Virginia Law Foundation in 2010.

Richard Cullen

Chairman, McGuireWoods LLP, Richmond

Cullen operates in high-profile legal and political circles. As chairman of Richmond-based McGuireWoods LLP, he leads Virginia's largest law firm, with more than 900 lawyers in 19 offices, including overseas locations in London and Brussels. Cullen is a former state attorney general and U.S. attorney for Virginia's Eastern District. He specializes in commercial litigation and has represented many corporations and elected officials. In 2010, he served as lead counsel for former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, when the U.S. Justice Department decided DeLay would not face criminal charges after a six-year investigation into his ties with disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff. These days, he says, "I'm an informal adviser to Republican office holders, including Governor McDonnell and [Ken] Cuccinelli. Between the politics and the law, those two are my avocations."

commercial litigation and has represented many corporations and elected officials. In 2010, he served as lead counsel for former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, when the U.S. Justice Department decided DeLay would not face criminal charges after a six-year investigation into his ties with disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff. These days, he says, "I'm an informal adviser to Republican office holders, including Governor McDonnell and [Ken] Cuccinelli. Between the politics and the law, those two are my avocations."

U.S. Justice Department decided DeLay would not face criminal charges after a six-year investigation into his ties with disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff. These days, he says, "I'm an informal adviser to Republican office holders, including Governor McDonnell and [Ken] Cuccinelli. Between the politics and the law, those two are my avocations."

James W. Dyke Jr.

Partner, McGuireWoods LLP, Tysons

This Northern Virginia power broker has wide ranging contacts throughout Virginia. He was the 2010 chairman for the Greater Washington Board of Trade, the largest business regional organization in metropolitan Washington, and currently serves on its board. Dyke also was Gov. Bob McDonnell's recent pick to represent Virginia on the board that oversees the Metro subway system, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. A former secretary of education for Virginia, Dyke served as co-chair of McDonnell's Education Summit in 2012. He says he's most proud "of my record of working with folks from both political parties to get things done." Dyke has led many groups, including the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce and the Northern Virginia Business Roundtable. He says his greatest accomplishment is "having the best wife ever, four wonderful and successful grown children and six awesome grandchildren."

the Metro subway system, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. A former secretary of education for Virginia, Dyke served as co-chair of McDonnell's Education Summit in 2012. He says he's most proud "of my record of working with folks from both political parties to get things done." Dyke has led many groups, including the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce and the Northern Virginia Business Roundtable. He says his greatest accomplishment is "having the best wife ever, four wonderful and successful grown children and six awesome grandchildren."

Thomas F. Farrell II

Chairman, CEO and President, Dominion Resources Inc., Richmond

Farrell leads one of the country's largest energy producers, Dominion Resources Inc., which had a big year in 2012. Last July the power company opened its Virginia City Hybrid Energy Center, a 585-megawatt coal-fired plant that can use up to 20 percent biomass to power the facility. In December, Dominion received a $4 million grant from the U.S. Department of Energy to plan, design and install two 6-megawatt turbines in the Atlantic Ocean for a test project. The company is bidding to lease federal space off Virginia's coast to generate wind power.

Farrell's influence, however, extends well beyond Dominion. He is presiding director at Altria Group, a crosstown Fortune 500 peer, sits on the board of the Edison Electric Institute and is vice chairman of the Institute of Nuclear Power Operations. In January, the institute awarded him its Distinguished Leadership Award.

He is widely sought after for leadership positions around the state. He is chairman of Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the Virginia Business Council and the Governor's Commission on Higher Education. He is a trustee at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. He sits on the Board of Visitors at Virginia Commonwealth University and was previously rector at the University of Virginia.

Photo courtesy Dominion

Richard D. Fairbank

Founder, chairman, CEO, Capital One Financial Corp., McLean

Fairbank is one of the most influential people in Virginia's banking industry. As founder, chairman and CEO of Capital One Financial Corp, he revolutionized the credit card industry with sophisticated data mining, before diversifying Capital One into a top 10 U.S. bank. The company has about 1,000 branch locations in New York, New Jersey, Louisiana, Texas, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. It's expanding its headquarters campus in McLean and is consistently ranked as one of Virginia's Best Places to Work. Capital One also ranks No. 5 on the Civic 50, a new award that focuses on companies that best use their time, talent and resources to improve the quality of life where they do business. Fairbank was named "2006 Banker of the Year" by the American Banker.

Heywood Fralin

Chairman, Medical Facilities of America, Inc., Roanoke

Heywood Fralin was a white knight last year, coming to the rescue of U.Va.'s ousted president and the Taubman Museum of Art. The chairman of Medical Facilities of America Inc., a company that owns nursing homes and rehabilitation facilities, was among a group of U.Va. board members who supported Sullivan and won her reinstatement after she was ousted by a three-member committee of the board last summer. Fralin also gave money to help stabilize Roanoke's Taubman museum, which came close to closing because of funding shortfalls. He's currently the museum board's vice chairman. Fralin and his wife, Cynthia, have pledged their 40-piece collection of American art to U.Va. Higher education is a key issue for Fralin, who is chairman of the Virginia Business Higher Education Council. He also was active in pushing for passage of tort reform in this year's General Assembly session.

Stephen Fuller

Professor and director, Center for Regional Analysis, George Mason University, Fairfax

Talk about an influential numbers cruncher. When Fuller talks, people listen, because he backs up statements with data and charts. Whether he's analyzing the financial impact of federal budget cuts or talking about leading economic indicators for Fairfax County, Fuller is the go-to guy for governors, companies and the press. The professor has served as an economic adviser to Fairfax County since 1995 and in 2007 was appointed by Cardinal Bank as its chief economist. Currently, he serves on the Board of Directors of the Global Environment and Technology Foundation and Tompkins Builders Inc.

Sheila C. Johnson

CEO, founder, Salamander Hotels & Resorts, Middleburg

Photo courtesy Salamander Hotels & Resorts

After years of simmering on the back burner, Johnson finally opens a pet project this August — the Salamander Resort & Spa. The only luxury resort to open in the U.S. in 2013, the 340-acre spread in Middleburg will offer 168 rooms, a 23,000-square-foot spa, grand ballroom, conference space and an equestrian center. With Johnson on a first-name basis with many of the state's top business and political leaders, the curious are expected to trek to the resort, where in-season rates will range from $425 to $575 per night for a room.

Johnson is an entrepreneur and philanthropist who carved out a new life after her 2002 divorce from Robert L. Johnson, with whom she co-founded Black Entertainment Television. She began work on the Salamander project in 2005, but it was delayed because of the recession and other challenges. Her company oversees a portfolio of luxury properties, but this is the one she has poured her heart and soul into. "I am thrilled that my vision for Salamander Resort & Spa is about to become reality," she told Virginia Business. "Our location in the historic village of Middleburg provides incredible access from Dulles International Airport for visitors from around the world."

Johnson also is vice chairman of Monumental Sports & Entertainment, a Northern Virginia-based company led by Ted Leonsis, and is the managing partner of the WNBA's Washington Mystics. She is the only African-American woman to hold an ownership interest in three professional sports teams, including the NBA's Washington Wizards and the NHL's Washington Capitals. In Virginia she serves on several boards, including the Virginia Tourism Corp.

Thomas R. Frantz

CEO, Williams Mullen, Virginia Beach

Frantz heads one of Virginia's largest law firms. The firm has 10 offices in Virginia, North Carolina and Washington, D.C., and under Frantz's tenure has been building up the firm's lobbying business in the nation's capital. While the firm built a new headquarters building recently in Richmond, Frantz lives in Hampton Roads where he is highly visible in the community. He's a vocal proponent for a new sports arena in Hampton Roads and serves on the boards of the Hampton Roads Partnership and Eastern Virginia Medical School. He was appointed by Gov. Bob McDonnell to serve on the Board of Visitors of The College of William and Mary, where he earned his undergraduate and law degrees. In addition, he sits on the board of the college's Mason School of Business.

William H. Goodwin Jr.

President and chairman, CCA Industries, Inc., Richmond

Goodwin is a well-known entrepreneur and philanthropist. His latest cause is getting behind a proposal to build a new children's hospital in Richmond. Rumor has it that Goodwin's family would be willing to support about a third of the $400 million construction cost. Goodwin and his wife, Alice, have been big supporters of cancer research, donating more than $80 million to major cancer facilities in the U.S., including Memorial Sloan-Kettering in New York, Johns Hopkins in Maryland and M.D. Anderson in Texas. Goodwin was recently appointed for the second time to the Board of Visitors at U.Va., where he had been serving as an adviser.

Gerald L. Gordon

President and CEO, Fairfax County Economic Development Authority

Gordon is a longtime deal broker for Fairfax County. He's been with the FCEDA since 1983. Since then, Fairfax has become the second-largest suburban office market in the U.S. and the home of more corporate headquarters than any other place in Virginia. The lineup includes Volkswagen of America and Hilton Worldwide. Bechtel recently moved its global operations, government services and civil business units from Maryland to Reston. "Our greatest strength continues to be our greatest strength: information technology," says Gordon. "What is changing is that it's no longer just IT for the sake of analyzing, securing and storing data. It's now the main focus for a lot of industries, and there are a lot of intersections, such as the life sciences, personalized medicine and alternative energy resources."

Tony Jimenez

President and CEO, MicroTech, Vienna

Jimenez founded MicroTech in 2004, and it has become one of the country's fastest-growing Hispanic-owned businesses. The company, with more than $340 million in annual revenue and 450 employees in 30 states, provides IT and other technology services to the federal and commercial sectors. MicroTech is a four-time member of the Inc. 500. The company also has been named the most successful 8(a) Business by WashingtonTechnology.com for the last three years. In December, Jimenez was among a handful of U.S. business leaders who accompanied Vice President Joe Biden to the inauguration of Mexico's new president. He also was appointed to the Harvard Journal of Hispanic Policy Executive Advisory Board. Jimenez serves on the boards of George Mason University and the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. He says his management philosophy is simple: "Always lead from the front, set a good example and never forget the people that helped you achieve your goals."

Hugh Keogh

Economic development/work-force consultant, Chesterfield County

For Keogh, retirement is a light version of work. Instead of 60-hour weeks, the retired CEO of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce spends two to three days a week consulting on economic and work-force development issues. In 2010 Keogh left the chamber, the state's largest business advocacy group, and since then has helmed several groups. He's vice chairman of the board of the Virginia Economic Development Partnership.

Bobbie G. Kilberg

President and CEO, Northern Virginia Technology Council, Herndon

As leader of the largest technology council in the country, Kilberg knows the movers and shakers in one of the most important job-creating spheres in Virginia. The council represents about 1,000 member companies employing 200,000 people in the greater Washington region.

A lawyer by background — Kilberg is a graduate of Yale University Law School — she has been tapped by presidents and governors to serve on influential boards. In 2009, she was one of five co-chairs for Gov. Bob McDonnell's transition team. She serves on the Governor's Commission on Military and National Security Facilities.

Kilberg also is a newly appointed member of the Board of Visitors at the University of Virginia, where she began a four-year term in July.

Kilberg was named Business Leader of the Year by Washingtonian Magazine in 2009, and her name has appeared on lists of the region's Tech Titans. She is a director on the board of United Bank and has served on many others boards in Northern Virginia, including George Washington University and the Wolf Trap Foundation for the Performing Arts.

Photo by Rick DeBerry

The secret to wielding power, she says, "is to help others and provide value to an entire community. At NVTC, we work very hard to promote policies that grow the economy of the commonwealth and thus provide jobs and enhance Virginians' quality of life."

He leads Virginians for Reliable Energy, an advocacy group for state energy development, and he just finished a two-year term as chairman for Lead Virginia, a statewide leadership development program. "The most time-consuming thing I do is consult for CCAM [the Commonwealth Center for Advanced Manufacturing research center in Prince George County]," he says. In that capacity, Keogh works on economic and work-force development issues in the state's Southern and Southwest areas.

Ted Leonsis

Founder, chairman and majority owner, Monumental Sports & Entertainment, Washington, D.C.

From sports teams to next-generation technology firms and filmmaking, Leonsis' influence in the Washington, D.C., area is diverse. Monumental Sports & Entertainment owns and operates the Washington Capitals, Washington Wizards and the Washington Mystics. It also operates the Verizon

Jeffrey M. Lacker

President, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond

Photo by Clement Britt

Lacker was a dissenting voice last year on the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC), the group that makes key decisions about interest rates and the growth of the nation's money supply.

At all eight FOMC meetings in 2012, Lacker cast the lone vote against Fed decisions such as keeping interest rates low as long as the national unemployment rate stays above 6.5 percent and using "quantitative easing" to stimulate the economy.

An inflation hawk like his predecessor, Alfred Broaddus, Lacker is not a voting member of the committee this year but still lets his concerns be known. "I see an increased risk, given the course the committee has set, that inflation pressures emerge and are not thwarted in a timely way. I see material upside risks to inflation in 2014 and beyond, given the current trajectory for monetary policy," he said in a recent speech.

Lacker will become a voting committee member again in 2015.

He is a member of the Executive Committee of Venture Richmond and serves as director for the boards of the Council for Economic Education, the World Affairs Council of Greater Richmond and Richmond's Future. He is also a member of the advisory board of ROSMY and serves on the University of Richmond Board of Trustees.

Center in D.C., the Kettler Capital Iceplex in Arlington and the Patriot Center at George Mason University. An avid investor, he has made many personal investments in growth technology groups. Recently, he led Revolution Growth investments in Vienna-based FedBid and Reston-based Resonate. Through the Leonsis Foundation, he has supported more than 400 charities in the past year, many in the Washington region. His latest project is helping to build up Northern Virginia's Ballston neighborhood by mentoring and possibly investing in the winner of Ballston's Business Improvement District's LaunchPad Challenge. He blogs at tedstake.monumentalnetwork.com.

Margaret G. Lewis

President, HCA Health System's Capital Division, Richmond

The daughter of a first-generation immigrant, Lewis was the first in her family to go to college. She knew early in life that she wanted to pursue nursing, which she described in a newspaper opinion piece as "no more honorable or noble a profession, no greater calling, no better way to shape lives while making a living." Lewis started her career as a nursing student at Chippenham Hospital in Richmond and rose through various nursing and executive roles in HCA. Today, as president of HCA Health System's Capital Division, she oversees 17 hospitals in four states. Active in the community, she currently is on the boards of Smithfield Foods, Richmond's Future, the Science Museum of Virginia, the Virginia Hospital & Healthcare Association and the Federation of American Hospitals.

John A. Luke

Chairman and CEO, MeadWestvaco Corp., Richmond

Luke heads paper and packaging conglomerate MeadWestvaco Corp., whose roots go back to a pulp and paper company founded by his ancestors in 1888. Luke, who has worked for the company since 1979, has been president and CEO since 1992, overseeing the company's merger with Mead Corp. in 2002 and its move to Richmond from Connecticut in 2006. Luke is a leader in the paper and manufacturing industries and business, serving on the boards of The Bank of New York Mellon, The Timken Co., FM Global, National Association of Manufacturers and the American Forest & Paper Association. He is a trustee of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

Vincent and Suzanne Mastracco

Partner, Kaufman & Canoles, Norfolk

As a business lawyer, Vincent Mastracco has been instrumental in putting together some of the most significant commercial development deals in Hampton Roads. However, it's his community service for which he and his wife, Suzanne, are best known. Much of his time is devoted to his service on the U.Va. Board of Visitors and the Board of Trustees of Eastern Virginia Medical School, where he chairs the investment committee. He also serves on the boards of the Greater Norfolk Corp., Hampton Roads Partnership, the Virginia Foundation of Independent Colleges and Virginia Wesleyan College. Suzanne is mostly interested in art-related causes. She is a trustee at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and is on the board of the Virginia Arts Festival.

James and Frances McGlothlin

Founder, chairman & CEO, The United Co., Bristol

Philanthropic causes take up most of the McGlothlins' time these days. James is a trustee at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, which includes a wing named after the couple. It houses the private art collection they donated to the museum. The couple also has started an annual leadership forum at The College of William & Mary, which brings national leaders to the business and law schools each year to teach classes and discuss national issues. McGlothlin is on the Board of Directors of Mountain Mission School in Grundy, which serves at-risk youth from around the country. Last year McGlothlin co-chaired the national campaign for First Tee. It raised $106 million for the nonprofit, which offers golf and life lessons to at-risk youth.

Thurston R. Moore

Chairman emeritus, Hunton & Williams LLP, Richmond

Since becoming chairman emeritus last year at Hunton & Williams, Moore is spending his time on strategic planning rather than day-to-day supervision. A key focus area is community leadership. "The role of the citizen lawyer is something we take very seriously," he says. Moore leads by example, serving as a director or trustee of nine community organizations and not-for-profit groups. His biggest commitments include his role as president of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' Board of Trustees, trustee for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and member of the board of governors for St. Christopher's School, which four of his children have attended.

Since becoming chairman emeritus last year at Hunton & Williams, Moore is spending his time on strategic planning rather than day-to-day supervision. A key focus area is community leadership. "The role of the citizen

Alex Nyerges

Director, Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond

In his seventh year as director of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Alex Nyerges has led the museum through a transformation. Since the VMFA's new wing opened in 2010, attendance has doubled to more than 600,000 annual visitors, and membership has increased about six times to 36,000 households. It also has brought in renowned special exhibitions, including Picasso pieces from the Musée National Picasso and Louis Comfort Tiffany's glass. The next goal? Expanding the museum's reach into Northern Virginia. "We believe we can do more for our fellow citizens in the northern part of the state," he says. Although his job leaves him with few free weekends or evenings, Nyerges

Charles W. "Wick" Moorman

Chairman, president and CEO, Norfolk Southern Corp., Norfolk

Norfolk Southern plans to spend $2 billion on capital improvements this year. The money will be spent on roadway improvements, new locomotives and freight cars plus upgraded computers and systems.

Moorman became president of the company in 2004, CEO in 2005 and chairman in 2006, succeeding longtime executive David Goode. Railway Age named him the "Railroader of the Year" for 2011, the year the company recorded its best-ever financial results.

One of the major projects under Moorman's watch has been the Heartland Corridor, a public-private project to facilitate double-stacked trains. With the raising of tunnel clearances and other improvements, travel between Norfolk and Chicago was reduced from four days to three days.

Moorman has pushed initiatives at Norfolk Southern to reduce its carbon footprint. Its sustainability program strives to achieve industry leadership in fuel conservation, emissions reduction, efficient energy use, recycling, use of renewable materials and environmental partnerships.

Moorman serves on the boards of the Association of American Railroads and the American Coalition for Clean Coal Electricity. He is chairman of the Board of Trustees of The Chrysler Museum of Art and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges.

Photo by Mark Rhodes

He is on the boards of The Nature Conservancy of Virginia, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and the Eastern Virginia Medical School Foundation, and he is a member of the Business Roundtable, the American Society of Corporate Executives, the Business Council and The Kennedy Center Corporate Fund Board.

tries to spend time each day on his creative pursuits: writing and photography. "For me, that's my outlet on a daily basis, as is running and biking."

Julien G. Patterson

Founder and chairman, Omniplex World Services Corp. Chantilly

After 10 years in the CIA, Patterson founded his security company in 1990, which has grown into a major enterprise that reports $100 million in annual revenue and employs 3,500 people worldwide. Patterson's knowledge and expertise is sought on a number of business and community-related boards. He currently serves as a board member of Virginia FREE, the Virginia Economic Development Partnership, Bay Banks, Northern Neck Insurance Co. and SIGNA.

Stanley and Dorothy Pauley

Chairman and CEO, Carpenter Co., Richmond

The Pauleys fell in love with Richmond as soon as they moved to Virginia's capital from Canada in 1945 and have expressed their enthusiasm through both their time and money. "We love this city," Dorothy Pauley says. "This city is fantastic as to all the things that are available." The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts — where she gave tours as a docent for many years and he serves as an honorary director — has been a major beneficiary of the couple. They gave $8 million during the museum's capital campaign. Virginia Commonwealth University's Pauley Heart Center ($5 million) and Richmond's performing arts center, CenterStage ($3 million), also are beneficiaries of the Pauley Family Foundation. She serves on the board of directors of CenterStage, the MCV Foundation and the Jenkins Foundation, whose mission is to improve health care in Richmond. He is owner, chairman and CEO of the cushion and foam manufacturer Carpenter Co.

George J. Pedersen

Chairman and CEO, ManTech International Corp., Fairfax

Pedersen is co-founder of ManTech International Corp., a $3 billion-a-year government contractor that started in 1968 with a single contract to develop war-gaming models for the U.S. Navy's submarine community. Pedersen took the company public in 2002, growing it organically and through acquisitions. ManTech's most recent acquisitions have been in the fast-growing health-care IT and cyber-security markets. Pedersen is active in the industry. He serves on the Board of Trustees and the executive committee of the National Defense Industrial Association (NDIA). He also is vice chairman of its Education and Lobbying Committee.

Milton V. Peterson

Founder and chairman of The Peterson Cos., Fairfax

Peterson is founder of one of the largest privately owned real estate companies in the D.C. metro area. His company spans more than four decades and is responsible for major projects such as Tysons McLean office park and Fair Lakes. Peterson's latest mixed-use development is National Harbor in Prince George's County, Md., which features shopping, dining, hotels and residences. A casino may soon be part of the mix. In November, Maryland voters approved a referendum which allows for a sixth gaming license in Maryland. MGM Resorts will be applying for the license to develop a resort casino at the Harbor. This year, Tanger Factory Outlet Centers also should open at National Harbor. The $100 million project should bring 1,000 full- and part-time jobs to the area after it's completed.

Pam and Richard S. "Major" Reynolds

Philanthropists, Richmond

Pam and Major Reynolds have helped shape the arts and education in the commonwealth. Pam has served and continues to serve on numerous boards. She's the past chair of the Board of Trustees of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. She's also co-chair of Richmond Ballet's Leap Week, a regional celebration of ballet that will take place March 17-24. He is president of the Richard S. Reynolds Foundation, which donates to many causes. Recently, the foundation donated half a million dollars to the United Service Organization's Warrior and Family Center at Fort Belvoir. The center provides a relaxing setting for wounded veterans and their families. Major says the donation

Michael Petters

President & CEO, Huntington Ingalls Industries Inc., Newport News

Photo by Mark Rhodes

U.S. Navy and one of only two builders of nuclear-powered submarines. Petters joined Newport News Shipbuilding in 1987 as a planner, rose through management positions to eventually become president of Newport News shipyard and then president of all shipbuilding operations under Northrop Grumman Corp. He became CEO of Huntington Ingalls when Northrop Grumman spun off the division in 2011.

The company recently opened an office in Houston to pursue opportunities in the energy infrastructure market for its Avondale shipyard, which is scheduled to close at the end of the year. "[We're] trying to find a way to redeploy an asset that is planned to close so it's a chance to make something out of nothing," Petters says.

Leading a Fortune 500 firm leaves Petters little time outside of work, but he does sit on the board of directors of the Naval Aviation Museum Foundation and the board of the U.S. Naval Academy Foundation. Petters is a 1982 graduate of the Naval Academy and served as an officer on the submarine USS George Bancroft.

Petters heads shipbuilder Huntington Ingalls Industries Inc., Virginia's largest industrial employer. With 21,000 employees at its Newport News Shipbuilding shipyard, work-force development continues to be a major focus for Huntington Ingalls. "The center of what we do are the people who come to work every day and commit their lives to something that's a lot bigger than just building ships," says Petters. A $72 million Apprentice School is currently under construction close to the shipyard.

Huntington Ingalls is the only builder of aircraft carriers for the

is a way to say thank you to soldiers who have served in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. "We felt this was an opportunity for us to do something for them that should be, and could be a great benefit to both the veterans themselves and their families," Major says.

Ralph W. Shrader

Chairman, CEO, President, Booz Allen Hamilton Inc., McLean

Booz Allen, a McLean-based management and technology consulting company, has revenues of $5.8 billion and approximately 25,000 employees. Last spring, Fortune magazine named Booz Allen to its list of "World's Most Admired Companies." In June, Shrader delivered the Northern Virginia Technology Council's "Titans of Technology" speech. He has also spoken at various conferences and business schools throughout the world including ones sponsored by The World Economic Forum, Yale School of Management and The Aspen Institute. Shrader serves on the board of ServiceSource, the largest community rehabilitative program in Virginia. He's received leadership awards from the National Business & Disability Council and the Thurgood Marshall College Fund and other organizations.

Philip A. Shucet

President, The Philip A. Shucet Co., Norfolk

He's been nicknamed "Mr. Fix-It," and for good reason. Shucet saved The Tide, a 7.4-mile light rail system in Norfolk that was behind schedule and over budget. A year after opening, The Tide had recorded 1.6 million trips and an average weekday boarding of 5,040. During last year's elections Virginia Beach voters also passed a referendum to extend the light rail to their city. A decade ago, as commissioner for the Virginia Department of Transportation, Shucet helped the agency improve its on-time and on-budget performance. Today, Shucet has returned to leading The Philip A. Shucet Co., a consulting firm in Norfolk.

J. Knox Singleton

CEO, Inova Health System, Falls Church

Under Singleton, Inova has become the largest health system in Northern Virginia and has garnered a number of accolades along the way. Five Inova hospitals were recognized in U.S. News & World Report's "Best Hospitals" list for 2012-13. Last year, Singleton was selected by Becker's Hospital Review as one of the nation's 300 hospital and health

Larry Sabato

Director of the University of Virginia Center for Politics, Charlottesville

When this political commentator speaks, the nation listens. Sabato has been called "probably the most quoted college professor in the land" by the Wall Street Journal and "America's favorite political scientist" by Fox News. His political website, the Crystal Ball, has been hailed for accurately predicting elections, and last year was no exception. The Crystal Ball had a 97 percent accuracy rate in predicting election outcomes, including President Obama's victory.

Sabato, who received his bachelor's degree from U.Va. in 1974, has kept his alma mater in mind over the years. In 2011, he donated a ticket to President Lincoln's funeral to U.Va. Six years earlier, he made a $1 million donation to the school, the largest given by a faculty member.

With more than 20 books under his belt, Sabato doesn't seem to be stopping any time soon. He just released "Barack Obama and the New America," which analyzes the 2012 election. In the fall, Sabato expects to release "The Kennedy Half-Century," which will focus on President John F. Kennedy's life, administration and assassination. Later this year, Sabato plans to donate artifacts related to JFK to U.Va.

Photo courtesy University of Virginia

system leaders to know. Next year, nonprofit Inova plans to break ground for a major cancer center. The $252 million, seven-story building would be the largest cancer treatment and research facility in the Washington, D.C., area.

Ray Smoot

Chairman of StellarOne Bank Corp., Charlottesville

Smoot probably is best known for serving as CEO of the Virginia Tech Foundation until his retirement last July. During his tenure, Virginia Tech's endowment grew to $600 million. Thanks to Smoot's help the foundation now owns 17 properties in Virginia, including Hotel Roanoke and the Virginia Tech Corporate Research Center in Blacksburg. Shortly after his retirement, Smoot was inducted into the Southwest Virginia Business Hall of Fame, which honors business leaders who have made significant contributions to the region. Smoot still is making his mark on the business world, as chairman of Charlottesville-based StellarOne Bank Corp. and a director for RGC Resources in Roanoke.

Don "Robin" Sullenberger III

CEO, Shenandoah Valley Partnership, Harrisonburg

Sullenberger was a key player in attracting SRI International to the Shenandoah Valley. The Silicon Valley nonprofit established the Center for Advanced Drug Research in Harrisonburg, which focuses on improving the productivity of the pharmaceutical industry, helping the nation respond to biothreats and developing life-saving treatments for neglected and orphan diseases. Sullenberger lists the project as a "signature moment" that helped promote a technology business climate in the Shenandoah Valley. Currently, Sullenberger serves on the State Board for Community Colleges and the Shenandoah Valley Technology Council board, among others. He also is a past member of the governor's Higher Education Commission and the Virginia Broadband Roundtable.

Warren Thompson

President & Chairman, Thompson Hospitality, Herndon

Thompson heads the country's biggest minority-owned food service company, which has annual revenue of more than $400 million and employs 4,000 people. Thompson's company serves clients ranging from universities to corporations. It also has restaurants, a carwash and gourmet convenience stores. In 2012, the Herndon-based company won Business of the Year at the DC Chamber of Commerce's Chamber Choice Awards. Thompson also is known for his philanthropy. Thompson Hospitality donates annually to all the schools it serves, and in the last three years has donated $100,000 to Community Coalition for Haiti. Thompson also currently serves on the boards of Compass Group North America and Federal Realty.

Nicholas and Jenny Taubman

Philanthropists, Roanoke

Photo courtesy Taubman Museum of Art

The Taubmans donated more than $30 million to the Taubman Museum of Art, which opened in 2008 in Roanoke. When the museum faced financial hardship last fall, the Taubmans stepped in to help keep it open. The Taubmans are both on the museum's Board of Trustees, with Nick serving as chairman. Last October, the museum started offering free admission thanks to a $150,000 donation from Advance Auto Parts, the company which Nick headed until 2005. His father, Arthur Taubman, founded the auto retail company in 1932, and it remains the only Fortune 500 firm in the Roanoke region.

Nick's involvement in Roanoke has included work with the Roanoke Jaycees, Central YMCA, Blue Ridge Mountain Council-Boy Scouts of America, Roanoke Regional Chamber of Commerce, Roanoke Symphony Orchestra and Hollins University. In the 1970s he served on the Roanoke City Council.

Nick's sphere of influence reaches beyond the Roanoke Region, however. He served as a U.S. ambassador to Romania from 2005 to 2008 and was awarded its highest civilian honor, the Star of Romania by Romanian President Traian Basescu. Taubman was praised for helping strengthen defense, economic and cultural ties between Romania and America.

James E. "Jim" Ukrop

Former CEO of Ukrops/former chairman of First Market Bank, Richmond

Ukrop and his brother Robert may have sold their grocery store chain in 2010, but that doesn't mean he's lost his influence on the Richmond community. In his latest initiative he's teamed up with some of Richmond's well-known businesspeople (Robert Mooney, Theodore L. Chandler Jr. and Andy Stefanovich, to name a few) to form New Richmond Ventures, a venture capital development firm that invests in Richmond startups. He serves on several boards of directors, such as Virginians for High Speed Rail, Communities in Schools of Richmond, which helps public school students stay in school, and CenterStage, a 179,000-square-foot performing arts center in downtown Richmond.

Carole and Marcus Weinstein

Weinstein Properties, Richmond

The Weinsteins are active community leaders and philanthropists. They are avid supporters of the University of Richmond where the Carole Weinstein International Center, Weinstein Hall and the Weinstein Center for Recreation and Wellness have been named after them. The Weinsteins also support the Hillel program at UR and established an annual fund for Jewish life programming at the school. In 2012, Carole Weinstein won a YWCA Outstanding Women Award honoring her education career, which includes teaching at St. Catherine's School, being an adjunct faculty member at the University of Richmond and serving as a trustee of Davidson College. Weinstein Properties owns and manages more than 14,000 apartments in Virginia and North Carolina.

Michael J. Quillen

Coal executive, Bristol

Photo by Mark Rhodes

A longtime voice for the coal industry in Virginia, Quillen helped mold Alpha Natural Resources into a global coal producer after its merger with Massey Energy Co. in June 2011. He stepped down as Alpha's chairman in May 2012.

Quillen remains active in the industry, continuing his longtime service (20 years) on the Virginia Coalfield Economic Development Authority, where he is treasurer.

Quillen told Virginia Business that he recently traveled to Australia where he has investments in coal mines and is finding some new business opportunities.

The Southwest Virginia coal executive has clout in several circles. He served on the board of the Virginia Port Authority for nine years and was the only citizen member that survived a board overhaul by Gov. Bob McDonnell in 2011. Quillen led the board as chairman while it explored privatization, before stepping down in January of this year to concentrate on his newest role: rector of Virginia Tech.

"Rector duties at VT take time, but it's an honor," he says. Quillen and his family have pledged $3 million to Tech — his alma mater — for a new engineering building.

On the move

30 people who are making their mark

There are plenty of movers and shakers in Virginia who are leaving their mark as leaders. Some of the people on this list may be entrepreneurs, creative innovators, newer players in Virginia's corporate climate or new to the reins of power. Their influence is on the rise.

Kenneth Asbury, president and CEO, CACI International, Arlington

G. Robert "Bob" Aston Jr., CEO, TowneBank, Suffolk

Martin Barrington, chairman and CEO, Altria, Richmond

Marti Beller, Heather Loftis, Melina Davis-Martin, founders of Plan G, Richmond

Shawn Boyer, founder, CEO, Snagajob, Henrico County

Ramon W. Breeden Jr. founder, CEO, The Breeden Co., Virginia Beach

Bernard H. Clineburg, chairman and CEO, Cardinal Financial Corp., Tysons Corner

Alan Connor, president (and CEO in April), Cadence Inc., Staunton

Mary Doswell, senior vice president, Alternative Energy Solutions, Dominion Resources Services Inc., Richmond

Bob Eisiminger, president and CEO, Knight Point Systems, Reston

Victoria Harker, CFO, Gannett, McLean

John P. Jumper, chairman and CEO, SAIC, McLean

Gary Lisota, Valkyrie Enterprises, Virginia Beach

Thomas Loehr, executive vice president, Rolls-Royce North America Inc, Crosspointe Operations, Prince George County

George Keith Martin, managing partner, McGuireWoods LLP, Richmond office

Tonya Mallory, founder and CEO, Health Diagnostic Laboratory Inc., Richmond

Gracia Martore, president and CEO, Gannett Co., McLean

Gary McCollum, senior vice president, general manager, Cox Communications Virginia, Chesapeake

Chris Nassetta, president and CEO, Hilton Worldwide, McLean

Phebe Novakovic, chairman and CEO, General Dynamics Corp., Falls Church

Tinh Phan, chairman, Virginia Asian Chamber of Commerce, Ashland

Michael Rencheck, COO, Areva Inc., Lynchburg

Bruce Thompson, CEO, Gold Key/PHR Hotels and Resorts, Virginia Beach

Thomas Schievelbein, chairman, president and CEO, The Brink's Co., Richmond

David Thompson, founder, chairman, CEO, Orbital Sciences Corp., Dulles

Bobby Ukrop, president and CEO, Ukrop's Homestyle Foods, Richmond

Ed Walker, Regeneration Partners LLC, Roanoke

Della Watkins, executive director, Taubman Museum of Art, Roanoke